At the foot of the Capitol gardens in Pensylvania avenue (on the right hand side as you are fronting that building) is an inclosed space-national property containing one or more tenements and some conservatories and hot-houses .-Here for some years past and until his death, enjoying Uncle Sam's patronage, sojourned a Frenchman, learned in botany and many other sciences. Some companions, while passing these premises, were vaunting his acquirements to Mike, who, from a spirit of contradiction, called them in question. He doubted whether these eminent botanists knew the differonce between oats and wheat, and believed, he said, that a Bowery boy could persuade them that corn was clover .-Finally, Mike undertook, "botanically , to deceive the Frenchman with whatever he could pick up where they stood, in the lane skirting his premises. From a wreck of flower pots and rubbish, he selected of flower pots and rubbish, he selected one sound pot and a dead rat lying next the heap. Placing the rat in the flower pot he covered it up with mould, leaving pot he covered it up with mould, leaving out the tail, which he fixed perpendiculurly by tying it carefully to a small green stick which happened to be "convenient" amongst the garden rubbish. — He next called on the Professor, and told him that a friend, Lieutenant—, (whose ship having touched at one of the islands of the then terra incognita Japan, had excited some interest)had presented him with a very curious kind of gactus. This he wished the Professor to examine. No one, Mike said, had been able to make it out, and he might have it for ten years and not find five people who would; so he hardly felt justified in keeping it out of a public collection, and yet he did not like to part with a keepsake from a "friend."

GROCERIES & PROVISIONS! The Professor eagerly repaired to examine the vegetable curiosity. After a close inspection he determined what it Greek name-two words, as Mike said, averaging sixteen letters. The Professor exhausted himself in persuading Mike that the interests of science required that Tar, Pitch and Rosin, he should sacrifice to them the sentiments of friendship, by surrendering this rare production of the vegetable kingdom to the keeping of the botanist. The re-luctant Mike eventually consented, on the willing and solemn assurances of the Professor that it would be tended with the utmost care: - and so it was. Placed in a hot-house, it was cautiously but carefully be-sprinkled with water at a temperature of seventy degrees by the thermometer. It was noticed and described in the National Intelligencer. The notice was copied into other papers. The plant was exhibited with pride to several eminent individuals; at length with the heat and moisture, the tip of the thil began to excoriate. The Professor was delighted --- it was budding. It was examined with great interest by one of the chief patrons, "the great Daniel," to whom the botanist promised one of the first slips for Marshfield. "It was too good a joke to keep." said Mike, "especially in a hot-house, so before long they smelt a rat." The wrath and shame of the Professor were excessive, and so was the indignation of the great not at the author of the but at the unfortunate botanist, whom he stigmatized as a " d-d frog-eating Frenchman, through whom he had been taken in, and who ought to have known

A WESTERN CRITICISM. - A correspondence of the Buffalo Courier narrates the following shrewd criticism passed by a rough Western man on the Prairie Picture by Beard, the well known artist of Cincinnati :

A few mornings ago, as I was standing admiring—as I confess myself quite fond of doing—that beautiful deer group, a tall, unmistakably Western man came behind me, and looked over my shoulder. I noticed at once the quick stoppage of SALT KETTLES breathing; but to my surprise, the stop was short, and something like a laugh quickly succeeded. Looking up, I saw a yellow face overspreading with a smile, and there was a decided twinkle in the

"Why," said I, "that struck me as being a pretty good painting."

"May be it's good enough for a painting," said the Western man; "I don't say anything agin that; but there never was no scene enacted like it. Jest look at that tall rice grass up there, and then the fern weeds below-who ever saw them grow together? Why, the one grows on we and the other dry land. But that's pretty wet land," he concluded, " and jest see them deers' feet—how clean they be !— They ought to be mud up to their knees; and at the gait they're going at, they'd be spotted with mud all over. I tell ye, when I went to that country first, the men skeered me sometimes, driving their wagons on to a wet prairie, but they'd tell me it was all right, and sure enough I find good bottom a foot down. Then the next thing I knowed they would be giving a pretty wide berth to a place that looked, at first sight, edzacktly like the other; and I soon found an easy way to tell was by the grasses. If any of ye know that painter chap," said the unconsciously keen critic, as he prepared to move off, "jest tell him—but it's no use," he said, lowering his voice, "that's a good
